THE REV. A. STEPHEN seconded the resolution. All must admit that those who devote their time and their professional skill to the alleviation of their suffering fellow-creatures were entitled to the warmest sympathy, and therefore required no peculiar support. There was one observation, however, he felt called upon to make. It was said that there were many who heartlessly refused to aid in the work of charity, but they did not remember what they had been already told by Mr. Kemp as to the contributions through the churches, and in the nature of private charity. Many preferred to contribute in the former mode than in the latter, and he thought that they should, thought, the most Christian. (Hear, hear.) Others again objected, for some reason or another, to the Institution, but contributed largely in private charities. The Sydney Morning Herald, in its editorial observations on the clergymen had no difficulty, in cases of real distress, of referring the distressed persons to many of their congregations by whom their wants would be relieved. (Hear, hear.) This Institution, he contended, deserved special support as the guardian of young children, many of whom were to be placed among them in the alleys and by-occasions of the city, and the least ostentatious of all those to whom all manner of evil influences. (Cheers.)

The resolution was put and passed.

DR. DOUGLASS said that according to etiquette as the senior medical officer of the Institution he was bound to attend the meeting, and that Mr. Fullerton (who retires by rotation) be elected one of the physicians of the Institution. He had great pleasure in doing this, and in bearing testimony to Dr. Fullerton's labors for the Institution. There were few medical men indeed who did more for the assistance of the poor than this gentleman. (Hear, hear.)

MR. CONNIE seconded the motion, which was carried.

THE REV. DR. FULLERTON begged to return thanks for the expression of confidence with which his brother had been honoured by the meeting, and to state by the desire of that meeting, that he was glad to be contented with his position, and to avoid any mention of himself.

On the motion of MR. ALLEN the President left the chair, which was taken by Sir ALLAN STEPHEN.

MR. ALLEN then moved, "That the cordial thanks of this meeting be given to the Honorable A. Deas Thomson, for the important services which he has rendered the Society as President during the past year, and also for his labors in the cause of the poor during the evening; and that he be requested to hold the office of President for the ensuing year." He felt bound to say that his honorable friend Mr. Thomson had been a most valuable acquisition to the Society, for during his presidency he had not only been most efficient in this capacity, but had fought their battles well and faithfully in the Legislative Council. But for him, he would not have had, and he said the day's votes before mentioned, and the Society must ere this have ceased to exist.

SIR A. BECKETT seconded the motion.

MR. ALLAN STEPHEN, in putting it to the meeting remarked, that the only positive fault which he had to find with the President, was that he had been too kind of kindness to the poor, many thinking that this kindness subjected them occasionally to imposition.

The motion was carried by acclamation.

THE PRESIDENT begged to express his grateful acknowledgments for the honor which had been conferred upon him, and to state that he was perfectly willing to act as President of the Institution for the ensuing year. He looked upon this appointment in fact as one of the greatest honors that a man could wish to receive. He was not, however, averse to the position so familiar with the management of the institution in its details as he could have wished having only attended the Committee at times during the past year. He was not, however, averse to the position so familiar with the management of the institution in its details as he could have wished having only attended the Committee at times during the past year. He was not, however, averse to the position so familiar with the management of the institution in its details as he could have wished having only attended the Committee at times during the past year.

He could not, therefore, lay claim to the merits or demerits of over-kindness. He believed, however, that every case of alleged distress was carefully enquired into by his brother, and that the Institution was not likely to be able to avoid imposition in some instances, still it was better that an undeserving object should occasionally obtain relief, than that those who were really worthy, though distressed should be left in want.

The meeting then separated.

Some of the cases were postponed on Monday, and are forgotten, and on Tuesday, a public holiday, in commemoration of the foundation of the colony.

THE ESCAPE OF O'MEAGHER.—We find in the Robert Town Guardian of the 7th inst. the following account of the escape of the celebrated prisoner O'Meagher, which are more detailed than any previously published:—"On Friday, 31st ultimo, Mr. Thomas F. O'Meagher wrote to the police magistrate of Roscommon, stating that he was in the County of Wick, and stating that on the following day, at 12 o'clock his parole would have expired, and that it was his intention to renew it. A communication was made from the police magistrate to the county authorities, and the following steps were to be taken with Mr. O'Meagher, and although an immediate answer was sent, it was found that Mr. O'Meagher was non est in the County of Wick, and that he had fled, whereabouts, but in vain. We are told he had escaped out of this colony, and that a ship on her passage to California had made arrangements to call off the Luncheon Heads to pick up Mr. O'Meagher, and that the ship was to be a continuation of freedom. We have made inquiries from a quarter on which we can rely, and find that Mr. O'Meagher has not committed himself by breaking his parole, as he designed his ticket-of-leave before he left this colony."

COMMITTEES.—John Hayward was committed to take his trial for stealing the several articles mentioned in yesterday's Herald. Robert Stirling was committed to take his trial for horse-stealing, and stealing his master's (Mr. Fletcher's) saddle and bridle. Mr. Robert Lord was committed to take his trial for assaulting Charles O'Neill, a sergeant of police with a stick, and for striking him.

WATTS POLICE OFFICE.—The police list yesterday, contained but two minor cases, which were dealt with in the usual way. Mr. Beik took his seat on the bench at 11 o'clock, and the following cases were called on.

"On Wednesday last, I enquired for the gentleman who reports for the Sydney Morning Herald, and he having presented himself, I explained to him that I apprehended he had inadvertently misread the report of the case on the previous day, and distinctly stated that I had not used the expressions attributed to me, politely requesting that gentleman should retract the statements appearing now, however, that not from inadvertence, but deliberately and wilfully, has the reporter for the Sydney Morning Herald falsified that which I said on that and other occasions. I then stated that I had no objection to his attempting to rectify that gentleman's reports, however false and untrue they may be, as they certainly have been in this instance."

WARR, BRUCE BECKETT—PARKIN and Lamberton were committed to take their trial for stealing at their work 43, George-street, at 11 o'clock previously to a case of WARR, BRUCE BECKETT—PARKIN and Lamberton were committed to take their trial for stealing at their work 43, George-street, at 11 o'clock previously to a case of
